DOING THE SPORTING THING

By JOE ARCHIBALD

"Back to the ice wagon," says Harold "Red" Grange, who will be remembered as something of a football player. Red has finished a rather short career in the movies and admits that he is no marcelled hero of the silver screen.

Grange came back to Wheaton and the ice tongs for but one reason. With the professional football season but a few weeks away, the red head finds himself in no shape at present to back even a High school line. Grange has his own team this year, the New York Yankees, who will make their debut at the stadium this fall.

The Wheaton marvel presence in organized pro football will do much to bring success to the gridiron sport, and if those who have frowned at the thought of commercializing football will just look over the list of old college stars who make up the teams in the new league this fall, they will regard the sport in a different light.

DOING THE SPORTING THING

By JOE ARCHIBALD

The old adage, "A rolling stone gathers no moss", carries very little weight when you think of the career of Everett "Deacon" Scott, the iron man of baseball.

Scott, one the greatest fielding shortstops that the game has ever known, has been a member of four clubs during his major league career and invariably the team carrying the Deacon on the roster has come through a pennant winner. Starting his first big league game with Red Sox, Scott set a record for consecutive games played that will stand for many years. After running his string to 1,307 games, the Deacon was yanked from the lineup by Huggins. Soon after, Scott was sold to Washington, and had scarcely hung up his hat when he was let out to the Reds.

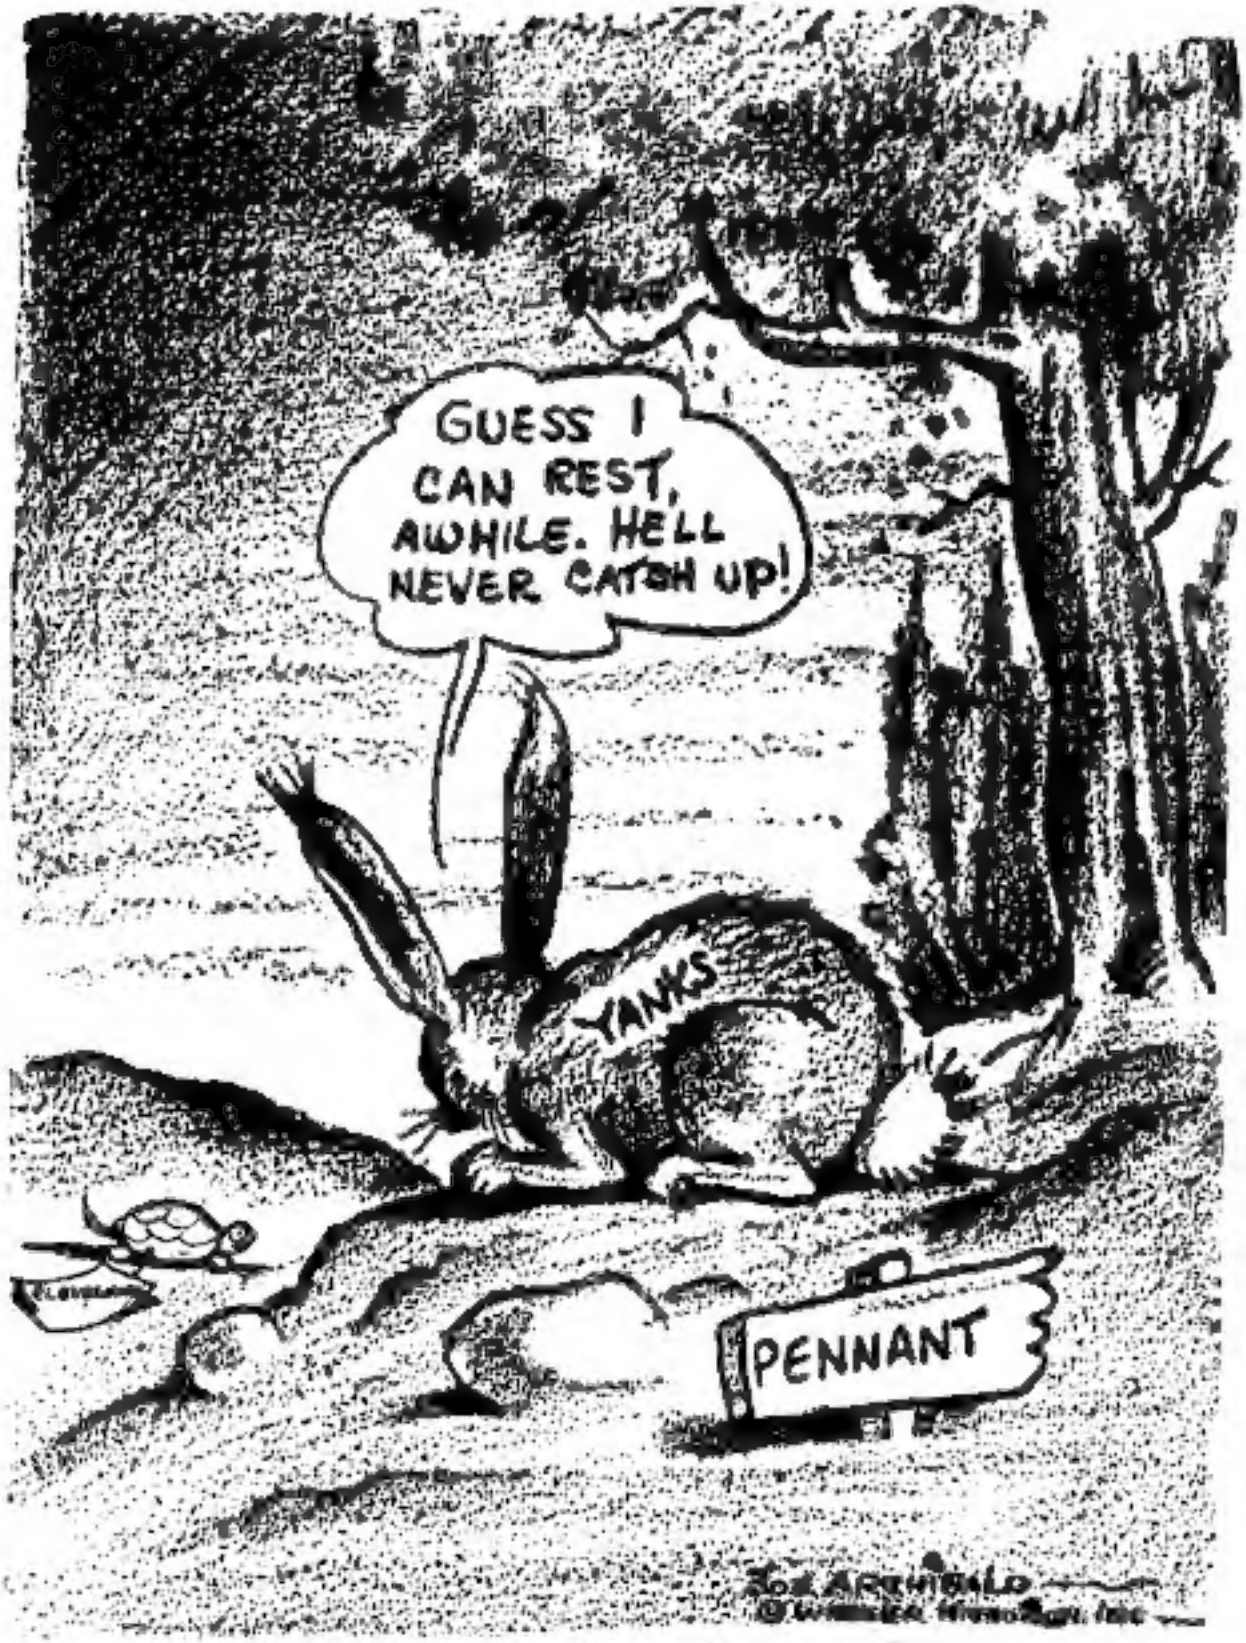
With Cincinnati well on the way to the National league bunting, it is probable that Scott again will find a slice of world series money in the fall.

DOING THE SPORTING THING

By JOE ARCHIBALD

BOB SHAWKEY
GREAT YANKEE VETERAN PITCHER
JOE ARCHIBALD
HELLO POP
HE'S THE OLDEST MEMBER OF THE YANKS
BOB WAS IN THE NAVY DURING THE WAR

PIRATES
STL
PENNANT
REDS
JOE ARCHIBALD — © WHEELER-NICHOLSON, INC.



THE HARE AND THE TORTOISE?